

Harvey Jackson Webb, Jr. passed away on Sunday, December 20, 2015 in Houston, Texas at the age of 82.

Born on January 3, 1933 in Atlanta, Georgia to Harvey Jackson Webb, Sr. and Maggie Pickard Webb.

Jack's early fascination for electronics started with radio communications back in the 1940's where he began his career in television repair. After his service in the Navy, this interest and training propelled him into a life-long career in communication technology starting with RCA, NASA and Sperry Univac to name a few. Jack's career highlights in the Space Program included training the Apollo astronauts, building satellites and cutting edge communications technology. His gifted hands were skilled to repair or build most anything he put his mind to. He designed and built a beautiful lake house in Conyers, Georgia where he loved spending time on his pontoon boat and jet skis, or just relaxing and watching the lake. Seeing his kids, grandkids and great grandkids having fun always brought him great joy. In retirement, his favorite pastime was travelling across the country with Peg and their pups in the infamous Road trek – stepping foot in all but a few states.
